1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

3. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Connolly et al US 2002/0017567A1 in view of Wenner et al US 6,225,141B1. Connolly discloses a bar code reader that includes a decoder 7a [0078]. The decoded information emanating from the decoder 7a is passed by wireless link from the radio 7b (RF communication means) to a second peripheral module... [0079]. At the second peripheral module, the signal is digitized and processed by processing circuitry 9c [0080]. There is also disclosed a memory device 9h and a touch screen keypad 9f [0080]. It is disclosed that the bar code is read by means of a raster scanner [0161], i.e. a position shifting irradiation laser beam. Connolly does not disclose the bar code label on the individual circuit boards within the bar code reader. Wenner discloses in column

3 line 25 that a label containing a unique bar code is applied to individual circuit boards. It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to label the internal circuit boards of Connolly as taught by Wenner. Also as taught by Wenner in column 3 line 26-27 this would facilitate identification of the circuit boards during manufacturing.

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Wilz et al US 6,622,919 discloses a bar code reader management system. Bard et al US 6,607,134 discloses a wireless bar code reader system. Shinada et al US 2003/0137568 and JP 10-240888 both disclose bar code labels on circuit boards.
